PRINCIPAL'S MESSAGE

I am pleased to extend my congratulations to the Editor and her student assistants and to the Staff sponsors on the publications of the 1966-7 Phoenix.

In this brief message I am going to attempt to reassure the members of the graduating class and to express the confidence of their teachers and myself in them. Daily we are besieged by articles and speeches from industrialists, business men and University professors that the schools are failing in their duty and that today's graduates are not prepared for their role in life. They feel that the modern high school graduate is not what he should be or is inferior to some legendary mythical graduate of past years. Allow me, Madam Editor, to make a pronouncement based on personal observations accumulated over the past two decades. It is simply that it is my firm opinion that today's high school graduate is not only equal to, but superior to his counterpart of a generation ago. The past twenty years have seen the courses and examinations in every high school subject become more intensive, more exacting and more difficult. This is particularly true in the senior grades. I also believe that the ambitions, ideals and concern for his fellow man have never been higher than exemplified by today's graduates.

And, so I urge the Centennial Graduating Class to go into the world, not with a feeling of inferiority, but with a feeling of assured confidence, that they are well equipped to embark on further education, to assume the responsibilities of citizenship, and to make a genuine contribution to Canadian solidarity and world unity.

DEDICATION TO HOWARD A. MULLIGAN: THE SPIRIT OF MATHEMATICS

Seven years ago Bathurst was fortunate enough to attract to its staff a man who is one of the most talented and progressive mathematicians in Canada as well as being a most inspiring and interesting teacher.

Mr. Mulligan, in his twenty four years' teaching at Central Technical School in Toronto gained an enviable reputation in many fields. His progressive ideas, his multitude of interests, his inventiveness and creativity, in the sciences and art and technical field as well as mathematics, made him the centre of activity and action throughout his career. Long before the formation of the Ontario Mathematics Commission, Mr. Mulligan was using the ideas and methods of our "modern math" in his classes. His efforts were recognized in his appointment as Chairman of the OTF Mathematics and Science Committee which met at Lakefield in 1957 to study in depth the educational system at that time.

Stanley Gore, a member of Mr. Mulligan's home form class 1965-6, wrote his research essay on Mr. Mulligan's contribution to the "new math". Following are some excerpts from that essay: "The disparity between technology and common sense, as a direct result of widespread ignorance of pure mathematics, caused Mr. Mulligan great concern. His results, published in a number of papers prior to 1960, castigated the following discrepancies: School mathematics had become "perverted by computation and prostituted to shopkeeping." Computational drill exercises as an end in themselves served no useful purpose, and were boring for student and teacher. Also, Mr. Mulligan protested the lack of emphasis on the essentials. The conception of order as a generative idea was totally ignored. The motive is, of course, to inculcate the young student with a visual, yet abstract notion of number.

The purpose of school mathematics was proclaimed as "the expression of relations in any field for which the logical structure has been established and made evident to the pupil."

He stresses the importance of structure, and of its pre-requisite -- unity.

What really matters is how you treat a fundamental unity and the kind of questions that you ask. The pupil who never learns to ask himself interesting questions gets nowhere.

The similarity between Mr. Mulligan's proposals and those of the committee, of which he was a part, is unmistakeable. In effect, the "Mulligan method" set the standard for the new course.

Mr. Mulligan's contribution in instigating the movement and in his capacity as guide and advisor as well as author and co-author of some of the most widely used of the "new" texts, has been immeasurable."

His students as well as his colleagues are aware and appreciative of it. But his greatest contribution to us has been the impact of his personality -- his humour, good-will, interest, involvement (in spite of himself) and yes -- "don't be stoopid" -- his delightful Irish wit.

We are proud of him for his scholarship, his talent in writing, his outstanding ability as a teacher. He is retiring from teaching -- supposedly to a life of leisure, travel, fishing, hunting and painting. But he leaves behind him a wonderful tradition of eagerness to understand, anxiety to be precise, a lively curiosity to rearn more -- both in the students fortunate enough to have felt the impact of the Mulligan Method, and in the teachers who have been stimulated by working with him.

Have you ever wondered what you are doing here in high school? Every student sooner or later asks himself this question. There are many possible answere which may include learning, gaining experience or enjoying yourself. But how many of you can say that you have received all of these from your high school education? If you stop to consider what the days or weeks have provided, you may be surprised to find them empty. But therein lies the paradox. You are constantly being told by teachers and parents that these years are the best in your life, and yet you find nothing in them but a void. However, it is only when you have graduated from high school that you will realize the impact of these years and come to appreciate them as the best ones of your life. The process of learning is not something that can be measured inch by inch, but at any moment the realization of a positive gain from your education may burst upon you. And someday you may feel a slight regret for not appreciating those days when you lived through them.

By now most of you may be wondering what all of this has to do with our yearbook, the "Phoenix". What better way to relive your high school years than through a yearbook? Irving Layton wrote in his poem "The Birth of Tragedy" that writing about love is more enjoyable than undergoing love itself; you not only relive the initial experience but also attain new insight in the process. Similarly, recapturing your experiences through this yearbook is also a most rewarding way to live through the past again.

I would like to take this opportunity to thank those responsible for making this yearbook possible; the people who set their goal at creating a book which will provide you with hours of cherished memories. The efforts of the Phoenix staff, Camera Club, class presidents, and of course our most patient and energetic staff advisor, Mr. Bragg, have been exceptional. The satisfaction received by my assistants and myself on concluding the pages of this issue far surpassed our expectations. Although there were times when my optimism waned, I enjoyed every minute of the work. In closing, I would like to suggest to those who are not yet graduating that you participate in your school life to the utmost because if you pile up all your tomorrows, you will be left with only empty yesterdays.

Rochelle Schwartz.

This Phoenix for 1966-67 is dedicated to you of tomorrow looking back at you of yesterday

VALEDICTORY ADDRESS

Mr. Davey, distinguished guests, members of the Staff, graduates, ladies and gentlemen. I am delighted to be here and flattered to be spokesman for the class of 6T6. But just the same, I am as nervous now as on the first days I came to Bathurst, a chubby, timid little fellow, all the more "out of it" because I had missed the first week of school. Quite soon I became separated from my classmates, the only ones who knew our schedule. Oh, my form teacher had given me a mimeographed timetable, but in many places it had nothing but dashes where my periods should have been. This, I assumed was an error on the part of the staff, one example of what later came to be known as "typical Bathurst". So, I made my first of what were to be many trips to the office. There, one of the ladies helpfully suggested I look at my timetable. I meekly told here, "it's nothing but a bunch of dashes." You can imagine my embarrassment when she informed me that the dashes were horizontal ditto marks, plainly indicating the class was in the same place as the day before. After four years of such experiences, I learned that what I called "typical Bathurst" was "typical Cairns".

What are the things that we'll always remember about Bathurst? Who could forget when Bathurst had a Bloch leading her orchestra, when Linda Berry danced at Casa

Loma, when Holzmueller and Haire battled it out on the cinder circuit for half-mile supremacy, when we all mistook Euclid for a mathematician, much to the big M's horror, when Liz Dyment crashed the five foot barrier, when Peter gave a Grade 12 class "Looritis", or when Les Robicsec's parabolic loci were the scourge of the Senior Tiddley winks league.

Now we are saying goodbye to this way of life, but as young people have always done, we look forward eagerly and confidently to the challenge of life which lies ahead.

And how do we meet our challenges? Well, first of all, I think a person must be himself. The books will tell you to add thinsg to your personality. Don't; instead try subtraction of the negative: cut out intolerance and greed and avarice and jealousy and hate. Cut them out and what you have left will be the whole person. Be yourself; just make sure it's your best self.

This summer I worked for a life insurance company and, in my spare time, read one of their books. In this book was the answer to every known objection in the insurance business. If a salesman was having a hard time he would say to his client, "just a minute" I've got an answer to this one." One of these answers was brilliant. If someone said to this salesman, "You can't get to first base with me", the salesman would turn his eyes toward heaven and say," My friend, it isn't a question of whether or not I get to first base with you; the question is: when you are dead and gone can your wife get to first base with the butcher and the baker and, yes, the candlestick maker?" They gave this book to a new young salesman, fresh out of Bathhurst Heights. When somebody said to him," you can't get to first base with me". He said, "That's not the question; the question is: "When you are dead and gone, can the butcher and the baker and the candlestick maker get to first base with your wife?" He forgot to be himself!

Number Two: Be a Good Listener. Why? You can't find out how people feel, act and think unless you listen, and, my friends, listening can often be many times more persuasive than anything we say. Lyle Fisher, a well known Industrial Relations Director, at the Minnesota Mining and Manufacturing Company says that 80% of our human relations problems can be solved just through better listening. The foreman listens to the man with understanding, the superintendent listnes to the foreman, the General Manager to the Superintednent, and so on up the line. They call it "communications" -- it's just good listening.

My third important suggestion is service, something essential to human relations both in and out of business. I looked up the word "service" in the dictionary, and Mr. Webster says that it is "conduct contributing to the advance of another". Prepare now to give freely of your time and energy to help those less fortunate than yourself.

In business service is often the thing that can make the difference, that can provide the edge that can win the sale. We know that people don't buy a bed, they buy a good night's sleep, they dont buy perfume, they buy romance. We must recognize that in our daily lives it is always necessary to give value for value received.

An executive in a company that sold dog food got all his people together and said, "Who makes the best dog food in the world?" And all his men shouted "We do". "Who backs it up with the best advertising program?" "We do". "Who are the people who are intellectually and morally honest?" "We are". "Then why aren't we selling more dog food?" A fellow in the back jumped up and the executive said "Who are you?" "I am Ira Greenspoon from North York". "Well Ira do you agree we make the best?" "Yes sir". "The best advertising?" "Yes sir". "Best people?" "Yes sir". "Then Ira tell the group why aren't we selling more dog food?" "Because the darn dogs don't like it".

What this young salesman recognized was that his company was not contributing to the advantage of another.

So my classmates, will you remember these things. They are simple, but be sure you remember them! Be Yourself; Make Sure It's Your Best Self; Be A Good Listener; and Be Prepared To Contribute To The Advantage Of Another. Be a Go-Giver as well as a Go-Getter. You have to give of yourself many times without a thought of getting back.

On behalf of all the Graduates, may I thank the many fine teachers who helped us students so much over the years. We shall never forget you, nor the unselfish example you have set for us.

Thank you. Thank you very much.

VALEDICTORY ADDRESS

Commencement means beginning but it is a beginning that involves a remembering or a looking back. For a few moments, let us remember and look back on the past three years.

We entered the hallowed halls of Bathurst Heights in the fall of 1963, ready to conquer all that faced us as the little ducks in a big pond. Our first year was one of adjustment -- making new friends, developing new interests and making the general transition from the junior high to the secondary school level. We had a lot of fun in developing our loyalty to the Green and White -- Ice pool, Lollipops and Roses, and working on our first Phoenix. But we also faced a lot of perils -- one-way halls, making our way out to the portables in 0 degree weather and those seemingly ominous students called Prefects.

Our second year at Bathurst was spent in preparing to take over leadership positions. This was the year of Finian's Rainbow, a tremendous talent show, the zany Christmas assembly, and Rhapsody in Blue. It was also the year of clocks never working and of the Bathurst Bears never winning a football game.

Before we realized how time was passing, the responsibilities of leadership lay on our shoulders in what was for most of us, our final year of formal education. At last we were the big ducks in a small pond.

Last year was a year of hard work both scholastically and in extra-curricular activities. Yet the results as we now look back on them, made all our efforts worthwhile -- Wonderland by Night, "And I hope in that Order", and a project which I personally hold high regard for, the Commercial Club's Good Grooming Campaign. Most important of all -- we earned our diplomas.

Commencement also means looking forward. What lies ahead for us, the graduating class of nineteen hundred and sixty six? On a restricted basis, each of us has a successful career in the field of business to aspire towards. However, on a more terrestrial basis, each graduate present here tonight has a responsibility to do what he can to help the plight of fellow human beings across the world. On an earth torn with wars, illiteracy, and starvation, there is so much that a young person can do to aid the quandary of people, not only in far off lands, which may seem remote to us, but in Canada itself. People with skills such as ours, are in great demand all across the world, as countries struggle for their political and economic independence.

Tonight marks the culmination of three years hard work at the secondary school level. We have now received our diplomas. It is to be hoped that we have emerged from Bathurst as mature young adults, with useful skills to offer to the business world. All too often, people tend to look down on the technical or commercial graduate because they feel that he does not possess the intelligence required for the attainment of a university degree. They do not realize that many people's interests do not lie in the pursuit of academic glory. These young adults are more concerned in finding out what makes an automobile run, or learning the intricacies of shorthand. Frequently, the general populace does not appreciate the face that our economy is built around the high school graduate. It would cease to function if the relatively few university graduates around, had to take care of all the practical work and monetary support involved in the running of a prosperous nation.

For most of us, this is the last time we will take part in an event at Bathurst Heights. In a few minutes, we shall rise to sing the school song for the last time. Many acquaintances will now be renewed after this evening, as each person present tonight, goes his separate way in the pursuit of a career and of happiness, armed with his Secondary School Graduation Diploma.

And now, in closing, I would like to thank those concerned for the honour of being chosen valedictorian of the junior graduating class of 1966. Also, I am sure that I echo the sentiment of the graduates when I express our thanks to Mr. Davey and members of the staff, both past and present, for making the last few years of our youth, most memtrable ones.

PRINCIPAL AWARDS

ROBERT CAIRNS

Last year, while in grade 12, Bob was presented with a school letter for his unselfish contributions to the school program. This year he stands alone as the sole recipient of the school's highest single honour -- THE PRINCIPAL'S MEDAL. While at Bathurst, Bob received another award which seems to exemplify our feelings towards him. The Warren Moran Trophy is presented annually to the member of the track team that best exhibits ability, gentlemanly conduct and leadership. No worthier candidate will ever have his name engraved on this trophy.

RICHARD PARNES

Richard Parnes has always been a first class student. In his last two years, he captained both the Senior Basketball and Senior Volleyball Teams, and was an inspiration to his team-mates both as a player and as a leader. Perhaps Rich's ability as a leader can best be described in the words of the poet Witter Bynner, who wrote

"A leader is best

When people barely know he exists".

Rich is rarely if ever outspoken, but goes about his duties in a quiet, efficient manner, that has won him the respect of his fellow students and his teachers.

RON McGINLEY

Ron McGinley, like Rich is quiet, but extremely efficient. A top scholar, Ron represented his school on the TV program Reach for the Top. He was a prefect, as well as being president of the school's Debating Group. In sports, Ron's interests were in track and field where he was a joy to coach. In examining his guidance folder, one could only find one comment that might be considered to be the least bit detrimental to Ron's character. His grade one teacher wrote.... "Ron has a keen sense of humour that keeps him in hot water". We guess he came out cooked to perfection. The final comment we would like to mention comes from a highly respected teacher and reads as follows: . . . "the nicest student I have ever had the pleasure of teaching".

STANLEY YOUNG

Stanley Young is one of the most academically brilliant students ever to attend this school. In 6 SA TO tests written in Grade 12, in which students are compared with all other grade 12 students in the province, Stan's results were as follows - 97, 97, 98, 98, 99, & 99, which in plainer terms means that only 2% of the students in the province stood higher on the tests.

Stan's leadership was shown by his selection to represent the school on the same panel as Ron McGinley on Reach for the Top, and for four years, he was a leader on the school's wrestling Team. We feel certain that his wrestling coach of last year would disagree with the comment of his grade 2 teacher when she wrote "He shows good leadership qualities but also displays an aggressive nature which is not pleasing to see." It was this aggressive nature that made Stan the outstanding wrestler he was last year in helping his team win the TDIAA Championships.

principle*. Consider the streath flow of en principie incompressible fluid between two points. Any increase in the kinetic energy of a given volume of fluid from one point to the other must equal the product of the volume and the decrease in the pressure between the tien points. Any, natively, one might say that in a shoeder flowing fluid the sum of (a) the product of pressure and volume, and (b) the smeth, space gy of that volume of fluid, murs, he the same at every point. Then it follows that where the speed of a flowing fluid is someter the pressure is less.

For the two boats moveed in the stream the speed of water between them is someter than that on their opposite sides. So the pressure in the water between the boats must be leas and they are pushed together. When a person stands on a railway platform as an capteon train speeds past, the air between him and the tram is travelling faster than the air on his opposite side. The pressure is reduced on his train side and the normal pressure of the stmosphere on the other side pushes him towards the train. The apparatus in Fig. 9-6 provides

DOES & BASEBALL REALLY CURVEY

A great deal of argument has been generated why the question of the curving of a patched haseball. Newsmich have produced elaborate photographic sequences, seronautical engineers have made tests in wind tunnels, and physicists have, made calculations. Whether or not a bill curves as much as it appears to the batter who strikes out, there is ample evidence that it does curve.

Several graphs of the motion of air in the vicinity of a thrown ball will illustrate the effect as an application of Bernoulli's principle. A ball thrown along the path AB with a speed of v, as shown in Fig. 9-8(a) will produce the same effect in still air as a motionless ball past

This year, after several changes in set-up and constitution, the G.A.A. began a new year of helping to co-ordinate the Athletic programme, with the constant assistance, resourcefulness, and whole-hearted interest of our vivacious staff advisor, Mrs. Elliot. Among other things, we held a toy drive for the Toronto Housing Authority, spent an evening at the Ontario Crippled Childrens' Centre and worked with the B.A.A. in planning some very successful B.A.A.-G.A.A. functions. The members of the G.A.A. were enthusiastic and Hardworking, and it was indeed an honoured pleasure for Nancy McIntosh, our vice President, and myself to have had the opportunity to work with these girls this year.

SWIM TEAM

This year the Girls' Swim Team was under the leadership of Miss Cullen and practices were conducted in the mornings, Monday thru Thursday at 8:00. These early-hours sessions proved their worth in the final tabulations at the North York Finals. The team's victories included one first, two seconds, and three thirds as well as a third place in a relay. Congratulations to all involved.

BASKETBALL

Girls' basketball at Bathurst has finally stepped from the shadows of limited girls' rules to boys' rules, thus presening a much more interesting game to both players and spectators. The girls worked hard and had mounds of spirit due to the efforts of one green and white teddy bear, one enstitution, one watch and one bench crew. As for their record, the girls brag an undefeated league season of 4 wins, no losses; missing the championship by the loss of one game. Everlasting thanks goes to their driving force, Miss Brown, the greatest coach any team could ask for, ho was always ready to help when there were any probiems. Thanks to all and may next year's Bearettes have as much fun as this year's did.

VOLLEYBALL

This year under the fine leadership and guiding hand of a new coach, Mrs. Sanders, the girls' Volleyball team, although, not emerging as North York Champions, proved themselves to be a team to be contended with. The practices, the wins, the losses, and the hardy laughter and fun were shared by all and most of the girls' were sorry to see the 1966-67 season come to an end. Our heartfelt thanks to all our fine coaches.

ATHLETIC AWARD WINNERS

SANDY STEVENSON was president of the G.A.A. last year. Her participation in most of the girl's sports including gymnastics, swimming and leaders corps earned her the respect of her fellow team mates. Sandy was awarded the Student Council award for leadership, senior girl.

JUDY TREVELYAN was the head of last year's instructor's corps. She devoted a great deal of time and effort to helping the Physical Education department when they were short-handed. Her determination to become a teacher certainly earned her the Top Student Instructor's award last year.

KIM AVERY won the Student Council award for leadership, junior girl. She was a member on most school teams and a class leader. She helped set up intramurals in both Volleyball and Basketball and is now our new G.A.A.President.

JUNIOR FOOTBALL

The junior football team had a rather poor season, being victorious on only one occassion. This can be attributed to the fact that the team was almost totally inexperienced, especially in the rather dismal early season. Only in their last game against the C. W. Jeffrey's team, did our team show any of its potential, as it went down to a heartbreaking 13-6 defeat. the decisive touchdown coming in the last few minutes of play. All the credit for the improvement of the team must go to the coaches. Mr. Lawrie and Mr. MacDonnell. Since many of the players will be back next year, this time with a year's experience under their belts. look out for the '67 juniors.

The "Bathurst Bears" started this season off successfully with a 19-0 victory over Don Mills Collegiate. This game initiated a series of injuries which led to the downfall of the Bears, as defensive tackle Walt Moser broke a bone in his leg, and quarterback Joel Kligman sustained a torn cartilege in his knee. Consequently this disaster precipitated many others, including more injuries, less support and a finale to our success.

But we would like to acknowledge that our shortcomings were not due to the lack of good coaching. We are proud to say that in Mr. Young and Mr. Smith, we possess two of the best coaches in North York, whose ability and dedication cannot help but lead to more successful season in the future.

CROSS COUNTRY TEAM

This year, the Cross-Country team, hampered by injuries and an inadequate turnout, enjoyed only a middling degree of success in inter-school meets. The team did finish second among high school competitors in a York University race and finished sixth in the North York meet.

However the team did have an outstanding individual performer in the person of John Blackstone, the team captain, who in his first year as a senior, was outstanding in all the races. His achievements included a third place finish at York and a fourth at the TDIAA meet.

At the intermediate level, Don Robinson, Marc Podell and Tim Payne all did well in various races. Mark Alter proved to be the best of the juniors.

WRESTLING TEAM

The Bears Wrestling Team had another interesting year, with the new members showing good potential and indicating an excellent future for the team next year. Of the experienced wrestlers, a few are of special note. Randy Yee is North York champion and second in TDIAA, Victor Helfand is a North York champion as is also Jim Margitta. The team finished in second place in North York with these three firsts, one second, three thirds and one fourth. Due to injuries, sickness, and exams only a partial team was sent to the TDIAA championships and no one was sent to the Ontario championships this year. The boys' are already making plans for a great year in 1967-8.

BAA LEADERS CORPS

This year the newly reorganized BAA Leader's Corps has been a great success. The old representation by class elected candidates was found to be a detriment to the functioning of the organization. Instead, this year the BAA consists of a group of promising leaders -- taken from all the phases of the sports curriculum -- fellows who desire to do something for their school by using their leadership ability in the sports program, who want to learn to better themselves both as citizens and leaders, and who want to participate, adding to the spirit whether it be in competition or extracurricular activities.

Yet the BAA has not been changed so drastically, the old organization hadn't failed us -- it just needed overhauling. The newly formed unit, still running the intramurals, keeping the school's boys well informed and planning such special occassions as Athletic Nights and the Annual Athletic Banquet still incorporates the same constitutional ideas its basic purpose. It has been built upon a strong foundation of experience both from the years of its past experience and from the leadership set down by its former members.

SOCCER TEAM

Out went the old and in came the new challenging group of soccer players. This year's Bathurst soccer team under the fine coaching of Mr. Treliving is headed for the peak - the North York Soc-cer Championship. Through skill, determination and spirit, the Bathurst Soccer Team should ex - perience a victorious season.

The Centennial version of the Bears Basketball Team proved to be one of the most successful in the history of B.H.S.S. It finished the regular season with a respectable second place in the western division (6 wins and 2 losses). In the quarter finals Bathurst met tough opposition in the form of Earl Haig and despite a valiant effort went down in defeat by a narrow margin.

In the words of our coach, Mr. Muir, "The 1967 Bear's were the most exciting team I've had the pleasure of coaching at Bathurst Heights."

Led by the scoring of captain Bernie Verbeeten, Sandy Laksman and Lindsay Horenblas, the rebounding of Joel Kligman and the checking of Dave Fine, the Bears were excellent representatives of our school.

MARSHALL LAW AND THE WESTERN AFFAIR

The time was high noon and the sheriff of Don Valley, Marshall Law was just finishing his lunch, when his deputy, Manuel Labour (a Mexican by birth) came charging into his office. "Hey, Marshall, there's a fight in the saloon." "OK Man (short for Manuel), I'll be there in a minute."

Manuel Labour (a hard working deputy) led the way to the saloon, while the sheriff, Marshall Law, followed in his tracks. Within a matter of seconds, the warped doors of the 'good spirits' parlour burst open. (figuratively that is)

The noise from within suddenly ceased, mainly because of the silence. Behind a drifting cloud of gunsmoke in the south-west corner of the corner stood the devil himself, Tom Collins, better known as the big drip. Five feet to the left, stoof the rest of his gang -- Artie Choke and Collie Flour.

The marshall hurried slowly to the centre of the saloon, stood firm, took a deep breath, and said, "You- throw your gun down." The gun slowly dropped to the floor (where else?) while the rest followed suit, but Marshall Law and Manuel Labour stood tall (6 feet 3 inches to be exact)

"Allright Collins, get your gang and come with me" "But Marshall, I didn't do anything. That man there accused me of cheatin' and I never cheat; you know that" Collins pointed to the man who accused him of cheating. He was the officer in command of the 4th division cavalry of Don Valley, General Store.

"Well General, is this true?"

"Ya bet your badge law. He took a card from the bottom of the deck, and that's what I call cheatin'"

Before the marshall knew it, Collins jumped over the bar counter while Artie Choke threw a chair, which, for the moment, had stunned both the Marshall and his hard working deputy. Seeing their chance to escape, Tom Collins, Artie Choke and Collie Flour rushed for the door, but not before they were overtaken by General Store and Joe the bartender. The odds were three to two and that ain't even. Tom Collins punched the General in the mouth; and wouldn't you know it, General Store has a glass jaw, so the General was out of action, which left only joe the Bartender. Would Tom Collins and his gang escape. It seemes inevitable, but wait. In a matter of seconds thereafter Manual Labour sparng to his feet, helped the Marshall up and Tom Collins and his gang of immorals were at his mercy. Soon after, they were behind bars surrounded by walls on three sides.

"Well Man, I sure cleared that mess up in a hurry." "Right Marshall, but what about the mess in the saloon?" "Oh you can look after that, Mr. Labour, but don't work too hard."

CONFEDERATION 1967

Hi, my name is Barry Solby, and how are you this beautiful spring day, 1867? I'm standing here by the side of the road, interviewing people on what they think of the provinces being joined together.

"Oh, pardon me, sir, but what is your name?"

"My name is Macdonald Cartier Freeway and I believe in laying my opinions right down on the middle white line, because I don't believe in dividing things.

"Well, Mr. Freeway, what do you think about the provinces being joined together?"

"I think the provinces should definitely; but we should n't SPEED toward our goal because of the goalie, and it could be very costly, but on the other hand, I have four fingers and every time I make a fist, I think of unity because it reminds me of the first four provinces of Canada."

LITTLE JACK HORNER.

On a dark and dreary night, When the sun was shining bright.	Ripped his clothes And tore his shirt.
Two dead boys	Now poor little Jack
Got up to fight.	Was moaning in pain,
Back to back	From taking his sword
They faced each other	And coming out lame.

Took their swords

While standing up,

And removed the slug.

Tom fell down

Took his sword

Tom was dying,

But wasn't hurt,

And shot each other.

A deaf policeman Heard the noise And came and shot The two dead boys.

If you don't believe My truthful lies, Ask the Blindman Who saw it with his own two eyes.

No Change

How he longed to see yet another dawn Over the moors and golden lawns; To hear the first chirp of the lark Awoken from his slumber by some radiant Beam sent from Zeus to conquer dark. O where sadness is lost in silence, And behind every door lyes pleasing presents. Dream-world shattered by yet another lie, To testify of many ways each defiant. Then up from rubbish - cradles prayers fly; But down below his feet were anchored. And eyes of coal looked for a lord. Then a waste-paper mind soon reclined. And on a stone his epitaph screams; "He died as he lived, buried deep."

Anatomy of a Murder

When you race o'er hill and dale, run madly through the bush, cross a moist, green plateau, let the prickly grass brush lightly on your shins, kick a little brush into the air, do you ever stop to think of the flowers you are skrunching? There you are skipping merrily, smiling, breathing the clear air, the exclsior of life, sparkling and bubbling like Julie Andrews chasing a homely goatherder on an Alpine slope. You do so only to hide the mass murder so cunningly committed underfoot.

Don't be too alarmed. You are neither alone nor always successful in this hideous crime. Sometimes it's not murder, at least not right at the instant. Sometimes the delicate body is only maimed and left to humbly, quietly, inconspicuously wilt, wither, die and vanish back to the Garden of Eden. And the family - don't even consider his family. They stand round him unmoved and shed no tell-tale tears. His mother-father (you mustn't think him odd for having a mother that's his father and a father that's his mother. That's just the way they are. Small wonder family resemblences are so strong.) is tough and does not turn away but endures and watches her offspring mangled, and fatally wounded. The heel of a Hush Puppy brings a watery bruise to one petal. His blossom almost severed from the rest hangs by a few fine cellulose fibres, stretching as gravity tortures still further.

The noble parent plant seems not to ask as we inevitably do, "Why me?" I wonder if this uncanny acceptance has come with conditioning? However it has been aquired I can only admire a bloom for accepting such abuse. Imagine the suffering when a young flower is nipped off in its prime and thrust intimately among others - no introductions performed, no consideration of class or status. How horribly degrading. Then to add injury to insult the whole bunch is grasped tightly in a sweaty hand until the very life fluids drip across the forearm of the avenger.

Why should we wish to commit such mean acts? Is it only human weakness and contrasting floral fortitude that makes us momentarily unnaturally vicious? In truth we all love flowers. (We'd better! What's the last thing one gets from those who have cared?) They're perfection on a stick with absolute human appeal. The petals, grown to continuing curves, balanced and complete leave no mind fumbling, searching, wanting. The colours of the rainbow hover at the surface. A flower's being is soft to touch, alive and yet unmoving and their scent wafts secretly, turns heads but does no pleading. Of course, they don't sing and some of them don't even taste good served with white wine, Yet even these shortcomings don't seem to drag them down to our level of competition. Then something more than vision greened by envy must arouse our malicious intent?

Is it because they thumb an anther at us and mock us - unintentionally of course? They must laugh at us deep down in their chloroplasts but it would be out of character to snicker aloud. They just stand, so perfect, so irreproachable and so enraging in their unassuming attitude, so humble and magnificent that they put us all to shame. If only I could believe there really were a horrible flaw like hypocrisy or false humility. I'd lace up my army boots right now and bounce the buds off every one in sight.

Actually it's quite impossible to concieve that flowers ever have or ever will be anything but simple perfection and I'm certain they're neither aware of their superiority nor wish to appear smug. How could centuries of men be wrong in the messages they have asked flowers to bear. Just think of all that flowers represent and the bitter message they could have if their perfection did go to their blossom and they were snooty. A bouquet from your love would mean "O.K., here's the best--measure up". And how could you help but fumble with selfconciousness as a bunch of red roses ridiculed and recorded all your inadequecies. If some one softly whispered that you were his little mountain marigold how would you react? He'd be saying that you were smug, conceited and made him very aware of his deficiencies.

I fear I've failed to prove our malicious manner valid and I can only conclude that we will in all likelihood go on in baseless revenge. Thus it seems just that we should suffer in worlds to be for our merciless cruelty. Don't say you haven't been warned if on judgement day a perfect pansy bends and bops you in the nose.

Whisper.

by Lawerence C. Firmin

How fine, how pure, to walk in sweet delights; To slip, glide, weave through untouched morn-dew, Like a fragrant gypse butterfly, free of earthly bonds; Who sent my amourish desires eagle-soaring. We danced, laughed, played amoung spring flowers By the pebble-brook, who played the refrain of kings, O'er the hill and scared meadow in the grass green. We paused to breath to whisper our love To an unmarred sky and embrace in nature's alter. As the feeble golden ribbons flickered and died Through the leafy wood we embraced asleep fell. The night was sweet, the air hung silent, The stars shone bright, keeping night vigil O'er our dreams in sleep.

I heard a chirp, sweet morning dove chirp. Lazily, half-asleep I passed my arm around her --A log, cold dead bark brown log. I rose as Pheobus, fast, hot. Shocked eyes fell cold hard fast Crashing and recrashing in horror; I whirled, spun, called aloud her name, It only echoed back of cold lifeless rock, To torment and strain my aching ears. My calls, my pleas fell lost to trees. To mocking trees, and that hideous brook Who laughed loudest to thick, blotched Thunder skies that spawned no sun nor moon To guide my frenzied search. Like a full red rose she faded in the night, Lost in green, beauty unseen. Cold and dark my meadow fair; The eagle dead; there was no new morn-dew. My whisper had flown.

To a Fat Lady Seen from the Train

O why do you walk through the fields in gloves Missing so much and so much O fat white woman whom nobody loves Why do you walk through the fields in gloves When the grass is soft as the breast of doves And shivering-sweet to the touch O why do you walk through the field in gloves Missing so much and so much

Frances Conrad

A Fat Woman Dreams (Answer to Frances Conrad)

I am the fat lady you saw from the train Missing so much and so much My skin is thick and white and wide No soft words rub my cheek

But my eyes see each leaf flicker Inside my ear I hear each gentle explosion of rain and fresh fire's orange snap. The ripe sun stains my wall While I lie watching Missing so much and so much.

No, my hands are not gloved, my eyes are not shaded Your eyes cannot see wet black of the trees Pierce my heart each gold sliver scratching the road Scratches a path on my mind.

And believe me, I am young yet My eyes may see yours unshaded And your words may rub my cheek Our hand ungloved together my skin thick, white and wide.

A Plea

Come, take my hand, and Walk with me. Be alive. And walk with me.

Life is here, .. a gift for us, So take my hand, And walk with me.

We're so alive, yet unknowingly, incomprehensively, close to death. Here and now, we stand together. So come, come here, And walk with me.

Now, be my love, and LIVE with me, In fields of endless springtime, and warmth, Let's walk, and talk, of us, of love, of death to come, To come and take your hand from me. But now, right now, Come, walk with me. I see the clouds, Surrounding me. Death is coming near to me.

But you're my love, So fall with me. Come, ... take my hand, And fall with me.

Untitled or As You Like It

In a deeply-drunken isle Of pure and unconcocted nature, I pulled up four of Evil's rogues, -- A goodly batch of bait. Sure To heave a hold of heartfelt thanks From devils all of melting ranks.

Across the voids and mists of Erie Crys Unknown's voice of doom, But Distant's gaze of hoary blaze Compels our hearts to fly. With pockets of naught, With memories forgot. Is all but nothing now? Not so in scenes of misty dreams, And all but death is dream.

Mountain Climbing

I stood -- I looked around. I saw many faces, many smiles, many frowns. Before me stood a mountain -- rugged. At the top I saw my goal. Why climb? I asked myself. Would you not rather stay down here? Why work so hard? You want to LIVE! But look around at all those peaks. How many times have they been reached? Their sides are ancient, but yet they stand --Many worn out. Arthur tried to master Smoky But he slipped and fell. He tried again on Blacky, On Slanty and on Sharp --But to him Rocky was the only one at heart. So easily he climbed. He shook a little at the top But soon he stood a conqueror. I felt his happiness run through my veins For mine was soon to follow. And so I stood. My mind was made. To stay down here was not for me. I had to climb. I had to see If life for me was truly she --This mountain. I took my hand. -- I started work. It took me years to reach the top

And then I stopped: I saw a light. I saw two. And all around the brightness shone On all those peaks that stood around But this was mine. --I heard a sound And all the angels stood around. I cried for joy -- for I had found, Myself.

Death of the lone survivor

It was the fourth day the sun again rising. Soon the vultures would again gather From flawless sky to hound his plight. His voice dried up long ago; He ceased to menace them. He kept his eyes fixed as he trod To play their croaks to promising springs.... But he could see them hovering as he desperately scanned the cracked earth. Where there pin-weed rose from a crack He would kneel to dig his fingers into the cool fissure and then suck On the shaded moisture on his finger tips. Then too, the whites of his eyes saw the vultres Hovering. He paid a disgusting breeze the moisture in his heart To help him rise, to plot, to trod. The little rising sparks slowly ran Together in glistening blasting sun Turning Shimmering mirage to white night Glossy eyes turned up and the thumped brain disjoint Dusty dry cracked lips kissed the dusty air before frantic delerium -- for, but, a, no! lucious glib drop ... An angelic tear dripped and moist the lip. And sank smoothe and spread through the parched cracks there ... swelling pink ... More! tore coarse cracked throat ... In ripples spurt from bluest sky ... Hovering over... in ... swealtering sea soaking till the pink skin shrivels and logged bones shrink And suck...for breath and pain...for drought.

LONELY LITTLE BOY

There's nothing for the little boy, No ring or rhyme or tinsel toy. There's only emptiness behind, And nothingness is on his mind --Expressionless is how you'll find This lonely little boy.

And wonder wanders on his face, He frowns regret for his disgrace. There's blank and blindness everywhere, And when you cry, he's always there. But though I try, I can't outstare This lonely little boy.

With laughing fools, he just pretends, He'll try all means to win his ends. All singing makes no greater sound When lonesomeness is all around --And nowhere is there to be found This lonely little boy

John Stocker, A13C

The Blind Girl

To live with the night In day, in spring, in June. Is it justified, is it right, is it fair?

To stand beside...yet to be so far away. Knowingly...far away. Looking at her, but not being seen And why?

All men are equal. She is a child. She cannot compete for equality. She cannot tear through the walls of darkness. That encompass her, In day, in spring, in June.

She sees black, But she does not see. Playing, laughing, Laughing? At what? Fate? Hardly.

But now, she sees.

Her life is black, her world is unknown. She must go on, and on Through mazes of night.

She smiles Realization, anticipation, hope, determination, Are on her side.

And so...at last...she sees. Though life goes on, in dark, and night Her dreams are splashed with colour unseen. And yes, oh yes! She sees.

Quest

In the beginning, All was dark, Life was fear, Death found his mark.

From the chaos Terror grows And from the terror, Man arose.

Man was weak, And slow, And much afraid, Yet by his mind The world was made.

He saw his life, His mind asked why: But from the night Came no reply.

He asks himself, Why man apart? His brain, his soul, Perhaps his heart?

Think, and reason, and recall These only man can do... It is an inner voice that says: "...and a computer too..."

Love, and sorrow, and sacrifice. Could...Are they the ones unique? "But doesn't a dog...?" The inner voice is weak.

Eternity has passed And all is dark, Life is fear Death seeks his mark.

The past is lost, The future not yet found, And from the lips of truth There never comes a sound.

And still he cannot see Why man is set apart, And yet that very difference Is the force that made him start.

For man can dream, And wonder, And hope When there is no reply When he asks of life: Where am I going...? Why?

DEATH

Death is a thing of fear, of terror, and woe. It has no pity for mourners but takes as it pleases. Young, or old, it cares not, for it has claimed you When you were just an infant, and did not know What was to come.

Death comes to the sick man when it thinks The time has come for that poor soul to quit this world, And go into the world beyond. Death comes very slowly, And slides its freezing fingers o'er the sick man's neck And kills. Silently -- It comes -- It kills -- It takes away.

Luiggi

Thousands swarmed below. He was alone. The sadistic crowd concentrated along the river banks waiting hopefully, anxiously, while high, high above, Luiggi L. Lazapoulos, a simple, frustrated and confused man stood alone.

"Why don't they leave me be? Go away, go away, please go away! You never helped me when I needed you, I don't need you now. Help! You, my dear wife, didn't know the meaning of that word, unless you needed help yourself. Money, you'll get it no more, work yourself to the bone, you strive to succeed in this chaotic society, ha, that'll show you, nag, nag -- you didn't care about me, no, all you ever cared about was who paid the bills -- and you down there, money, you couldn't let me enjoy life at all -- leeches."

"Jump, jump!" shouted the horde in unison."

"I loved fishing, loved to get away from the thronging, noisy, complicated life of the city, to be free of the burden of competition, detached of responsibility, to be able to just sit back, relax and enjoy nature, I'd have loved to lie back in the cool green grass and watch the clouds drift lazily through the clear blue sky, to have fished in a slow meandering stream without any cares in the world -- but no, you, my dear loving wife, wouldn't permit me this one luxury of life, we had to keep up with the Jonses, everybody keeping up with the Jonses, Jonses hoping to keep up with other Jonses -- what a vicious cirlce we live in where everybody is always striving to better himself by exceeding his limitation, driving to emotional breakdowns, to hopeless defeat, but, in the tranquillity and peacefulness of death I'll succeed, a victory in the hereafter."

The police sirens wailed and the rabble shouted. The police knifed their way through the excited mass of people. Slowly, inch by inch moved the police. At last they reached the bridge and cautiously started the ascent up-wards.

"Here they come in their feeble attempt to save me, a foolish gesture, don't they realize I don't want to be saved, and that thronging mass down there, the slaves of society living in their dream world, oblivious of all the injustices committed around them -- the wars, the prejudices, the inequalities, the falshoods, the hate -they're doomed, don't they realize that, the wars will be escalated, the bombs will commence to fall, the earth will cease to exist."

"Jump, jump." roared the horde in unison.

"Yes, jump I must, the police are almost here, they're shouting words which have no meaning, words which I can't understand, words which I can no longer hear - and below, water -- cool, refreshing, tranquill -- the silent water inviting, beckoning, yes I must jump, I will jump!"

A scream -- a splash -- death. The large crowd was silent.

Youngtime

Please come to me my childhood, And I'll ever go to you As you whisper through the wildwood. And you fairly follow through.

I'll ask know more of sunshine. While my mem'ry melts my mind. And I breathe the breath of one time, As I catch the moon behind.

You'll see me running madly Thru' the trampled, trodden lights, As I laugh my way home sadly, At the breaking of my nights.

I'll crawl to you my youngtime, For I think you call me back, But my songs were sung at sometime, And that sometime now is black.

My head will tilt in laughter, As I try to tame the past, But my tears will twist me after, As the longing leaves at last.

There's too much now to bury In the caverns of the gone, And the castles of the merry Bring the canyons of the dawn.

There're years to overpower, And a vacuum spans my dream, As I'm aging in the tower Of the thoughts that never seem.

I prayed to you in going, But you scoffed of my concern, And there's nothing left for knowing Of the things for which I yearn.

And there're voices all about me, And I can't control my call, And there're only dreams to doubt me In the offring of my all.

OUR MAYOR

Being mayor of Bathurst Heights has not only bestowed upon me the great honour, inexpressible in words, to represent a fine student body, but has also given me responsibilities and experience immeasurable by any tangible means.

The past year has been one of many achievements and worthwhile accomplishments. The United Appeal Drive and the Blood Donor's Clinic reached new heights never before attained. There was a marked improvement in the attendance and success of our school dances, as well as the unforgettable Prom at the Royal York. Although Bathurst's size is sometimes considered a hindrance, it enabled the Students' Council to offer a variety of various extra-curricular activities, consisting of a fine athletic program and an expanding list of clubs, perhaps unparalleled by any school in Toronto. Even of more importance I feel were the many ideas and events of the past year never before implemented at Bathurst. Some such as the Junior High Assembly, bicycle rides, school sweatshirts, and the intraschool College Bowl, I hope will be added to the list of Bathurst traditions and carried on in future years. Others I hope added to the betterment of the school year as a whole.

We should be grateful that we are going to a school like Bathurst which has really so much to offer us. But as it has been said time and time again, you receive from your high school life exactly what you put into it. The opportunity is always there but you must give of yourself before you can expect to receive anything in return.

I am greatly indebted to the Board of Control for their sincere and never-ending hard work throughout the year. I would also like to thank all those members of the staff and student body, who without their continued support, interest and hard work nothing could be accomplished. Special thanks should go to Mr. Davey and Mr. Addy our staff advisor, whose constant help and understanding was most appreciated.

There will always be the cramming for exams, the one-way halls, the football teams and the cafeteria food. But perhaps most important will be the many acquaintances of both staff and students which will frequent our memories back to the unforgettable days at Bathurst Heights. I would like to take this opportunity to wish each and every one of you the best of success and happiness in future years and hope that the friendships we have made here will always be remembered.

The Camera Club is the most active club in the school. It is always seen before, during and after school. It finds its way to almost all school activities including most sports events. Much of its time has been devoted to the Phoenix. You can come to our private Glacial Acetic smelling haven anytime after school and often up to 7:00. Photography, an interesting hobby and art form, was enjoyed by all those members who participated in the camera club this year.
